A report covering a range of capacity building and skill enhancement activities

2017 - 2022

The institution strives to imbibe the core values of effective nurturing, growth and development of students through capacity building and skill enhancement activities. The range of capacity building and skill enhancement includes but is not limited to:

1. Career and Personal Counselling

Capability building is woven into the curriculum to enhance career prospects through academic and co-curricular activities. Students are oriented to the placement cell and career services offered in the induction program and ice-breaking sessions in the semester, followed by individual guidance throughout the semester, securing placement during the semester and till graduation. Successful entrepreneurs and heads of organizations are invited to share their experiences with our student teachers who focus on the teacher competencies and skills they need in their respective schools. Recruitment processes and procedures are covered in detail. The information shared provides inputs for improvement of college curriculum, modularization of certificate courses and improvement of faculty grooming activities. Pedagogy papers familiarize students with and become well-versed in the language and communication skills needed to succeed in job interviews or enroll in continuing education. Exposure is gained through value added courses to develop fluency and confidence to face job interview challenges, e.g. Conversational English and computer education courses enable students to engage in conversation using the vocabulary required for job interviews. They further acquire technology skills to create cover letters, design portfolios, create presentations and use digital tools to draft documents. Core curriculum content sensitizes students to classroom dynamics (inclusiveness, individualized innovative lesson plans, discipline). Internship modules expose the teaching eco-system and its needs. They also have the opportunity to expand their networking, participate in exchange classes, and prove their eligibility to lay the groundwork for employment.

Postgraduate student teachers are provided with training and practice in academic writing, expository writing and English communication pedagogies so that they can complete their dissertation work and engage in research, content writing, and publishing articles.

Students are encouraged to write their opinions in the college journal as well as submit research articles for publication in the in-house journal Pedagogy and Praxis.

2. Upskilling

Students are exposed to creating diverse lesson plans for various school boards, practicing and sharpening the skills of designing instructional phases on short notice. Yoga is practiced for agility and strength training, soft skills for expression and expression are taught, craft and art are integrated to develop the skill of integration. Students are taught to develop differentiated assessment tools for diagnosis, remediation, and conservation. Concepts learned in language across the curriculum enhance students' skills in team learning and transdisciplinary connectedness. Students are required to maintain a reflective journal to identify gaps in learning and find possible solutions to reduce academic distress.

3. Educational aspect:

Through these courses, students are required to critically analyze printed texts analyzing content and identifying teaching points. Written text is used as a tool and inferential context is added for a deeper approach to the teaching learning process. In developing teaching learning materials, students are instructed to distinguish between projected and non-projected devices while learning how to develop thinking styles (transformative, inductive, global, linear, sequential) for holistic learning. A recent trend is to get students to develop innovative teaching learning resources that can form the basis of patented educational resources.

4. Technical aspects:

Subject labs (biology, physical science, psychology), language labs with computers and virtual studios engage students to experience and develop modern learning materials, e.g. Video lesson recording for improved teaching aids. The Computer Certificate course offered in Semester 5 teaches students how to develop video, audio, animated materials for classroom lectures.

5. Organizational: Aspects

Students are introduced to various organizational aspects which will help them to perform routine tasks with ease and perfection. Their organizational skills are developed by coordinating, organizing and participating in college extension activities, cultural festivals, e.g. AIDS Awareness Day, Women's Day, Human Rights Day, Communal Week, Food Fest, Green Days Campaign, Kshe Conducting trabhethis, conducting morning meetings, comparisons, co-curricular activities, college days, science exhibitions, clean India, drives, school events. Through school study project students can observe school administration processes and procedures etc.

6. Communicating with differently abled persons:

Braille, sign language and speech training are all pedagogy-inclusive modules that expose students to approaches and strategies for communicating with individuals with different abilities. Workshops are conducted to introduce students to assistive technology to boost the sensory abilities of people with specific disabilities. Students are encouraged to learn sign language themselves and apply it to the teaching learning process. D.M.C., research topics are encouraged and the focus is on developing teaching learning support materials to cater to diverse as well as creative students. Targeted experts are invited to address our students and share experiences and sensitize students for inclusiveness.

7. Ability to develop a seminar paper and a research paper Understand and appreciate the difference between the two.

At BEd level such division is done by students under the supervision of respective faculty, students are assigned action research projects. During the internship students are required to undertake a case study that serves as the subject of action research. A tool for data collection has also been developed. Data is analyzed and interpreted. The hypotheses are then translated and form the basis of individual interventions to be tested in the next level of internship.

The difference between a seminar paper and a research paper is explained at a critical level, and research methods, academic writing, and expository writing are covered extensively in coursework. Assessments and projects also focus on assessing students' abilities and understanding differences. After students complete their thesis, they should publish an abstract of their thesis in the in-house journal Pedagogy and Praxis. The journal acts as a sounding board that inspires students to confidently undertake various academic research and publications. Faculty engaged in research and development of students are assigned as teaching assistants. Students are trained to find and download relevant materials, draft instruments, administer tests, and analyze data accumulated experience in research-related tasks. Students assist in the organization of webinars, seminars, and workshops that allow them to contextualize research and relate to differences.

8. E-Content Development

Subject wise training in developing e-content modules is imparted to the students by the methodology faculty. Training is provided in all phases: analysis, design, development, testing, implementation and evaluation. E-content content focuses on different perspectives: cognitive, affective, behavioral and contextual. Students develop a high sense of creativity in structuring and sequencing subjects to complete the whole.

9. Online assessment of learning

The global disruption in education caused by the Covid pandemic necessitated online work in a digitized project-based learning system as an interactive learning strategy including administering online assessments through virtual classrooms using virtual classrooms and drive links.
